The nurse and two midwives abducted by Boko Haram on March 1, 2018, have begged President Muhammadu Buhari to vindicate them by rescuing them from captivity.

The three health workers — Mrs. Alice Loksha Ngaddah, a nurse and mother of two; Hauwa Mohammed Liman (midwife) and Saifura Hussein Ahmed (midwife) — urged the President to do whatever he can do “for the sake of Allah”, to save them in the interest of their children and the nation.

In an audio obtained by Ahmad Salkida, the Nigerian journalist with the deepest knowledge of Boko Haram and the insurgency, they could be heard tearily saying: “We were there for the vulnerable, now we are vulnerable.

“For the sake of God, for the sake of Allah, President Muhammadu Buhari, come and help us. Come and vindicate us from this captivity. We need your help; we need your help. Have mercy and help us.”

In the audio, produced just before mid-August, they said:

“To all our fellow Nigerians, we are pleading for God’s sake, come and vindicate us from this captivity.

The world powers, whatever you can do, come and help us. We are really vulnerable. We need your help. We need your help. Have mercy and help us.”

The three health workers penned a similar letter back in May, writing that they were “really helpless and hopeless” in captivity and would like to regain their freedom, as they were needed back home by their families.

“With heartfelt gratitude, we wish to extend out warm greetings to our dear families, relations and the entire people of our nation. We are the Nurse/Midwives that were captured by Junudul Khalifa under Abu Musab Albarnawi,” they said in a handwritten note, which was passed through a secondary source Salkida.

“We are pleading and begging with heavy hearts to our humble President Muhammadu Buhari to hear our cry for mercy and look into our situation and vindicate us from this captivity.

“Our dear children, husbands, relations and the entire nation need us back home. To our able organisations, please hear our cry for mercy. We are really helpless and hopeless; please rescue us and vindicate us, our families need us back and the entire nation at large.”

The trio were abducted by insurgents of the al-Barnawi-controlled Islamic State West African Province (SWAP) — which, though a breakaway faction, carried out an attack on a heavily-guarded military facility, killed some soldiers and international aid workers.
