

Sheikh Muhiddeen Abdullahi, the Sudanese

KANO, NIGERIA: Sheikh Muhiddeen Abdullahi, the Sudanese head of the Nigerian branch of the Al-Muntada Al-Islami Trust, discusses his meetings with security operatives in his flat in the northern city of Kano 06 March 2004. Al-Muntada, which is based in London, is under investigation in both Nigeria and Kenya for its alleged links to violent Islamist groups. Muhiddeen denies the claims, insisting that his charity simply builds mosques and schools and promotes the conservative Wahhabi strain of Islam.
