

1 1 1 1

Scott Stewart @stick631 · Oct 28

Yes. I think it is possible we could see some individuals, cells and maybe even franchise groups drift back into the AQ orbit, or develop their own brands of jihad, but I remain skeptical that a widespread reconciliation is possible at this point.

1 1 2 1

CALIBRE OBSCURA @CalibreObscura · Oct 28

For me, the biggest likelihood is a IS WA-BH remerger. That has both been rumoured for a few months and would also be a rather bad thing for the authorities fighting

That being said however, Shekau would have to tone down the civcas, which he isn't keen on it seems

2 1 3 1

Fulan Nasrullah
@FulanNasrullah

Replying to @CalibreObscura @stick631 and @intelwire

I could be wrong but it's not going to happen unless A, Shekau dies, or B, IS ditches the current ISWAP leadership, reconciles Shekau and undos everything it has achieved shaping wise with ISWAP since 2016.

3:45 PM · Oct 28, 2019 · Twitter for Android

3 Likes

1 1 1 1

This Tweet is unavailable. Learn more

Fulan Nasrullah @FulanNasrullah · Oct 28

IS are good are killing people they really want to kill in Iraq and Sham. In West Africa, different rules apply. With Shekau, another entirely set of different rules apply.

1 1 1 1

CALIBRE OBSCURA @CalibreObscura · Oct 28

Fulan, give me THREADS, I want KNAWLEGE

1 1 1 1